A.M. Service.

Sermon by Rev. George Gilmour — "A Meditation for the Last Day of the Year and the New."

"Tides of life are like the tides of the ocean — high tide, low tide — times of elation and hope — times of depression and despair. Those who live only for selfish gain, do not live. Those who live unselfishly for others, who give of their means, of their love, of their life — they live. Joy ever quickens the feet of those who serve. May we in this new year grow in grace, think how we may do something for others. May we find our joy, our peace in the service for humanity."
